LAUNCH OF PRODUCT OR SERVICE

Launch of the T+1 Risk Simulator via API

Destined for segment participants: OTC; Listed.

Summary: The service will be available as of November 9, 2026.

As of November 9, 2026, B3 will provide a new T+1 (anticipated risk simulation) risk simulation service via Application Programming Interface (API).

The simulator meets market demand for access to a preview of margin calculation information before its effective provision through the B3 Clearinghouse's usual processes.

The service will allow anticipated provision of a proxy version of risk metrics in portfolios comprised exclusively of instruments and segments previously defined by B3, as long as there are no trading, regulatory or risk impediments that restrict their advance publication.

The list of instruments or segments covered by the new functionality are available on B3's website. B3 may update this list at any time, considering trading, regulatory and risk management aspects. If such occurs, it will provide a new list at the same address. B3's website will also provide the timetables of metrics updates and when it will be published for consultation (SLAs).

Anticipated access to risk metrics through this service will not replace the current provision of risk metrics through the existing files and systems in any case. B3 will consider these already-provided metrics for margin calls, risk limit frameworks, collateral valuation and other risk controls. Therefore the services to be provided are of a purely advisory nature. Any consultation of the risk metrics through this service while not observing the service's SLAs, covered segments and limitations may result in outdated or incomplete data.

The service may be accessed via the following models:

1. Direct access by the end investor, through its own integration with the API provided by B3;
2. Access intermediated by the end investor's service provider, which will execute integration with the B3 API, conditional upon prior authorization of the responsible Full Trading Participant/Settlement Participant.

In due course, B3's official channels will publish detailed information about technical specifications, means of integration, the contracting process and commercial conditions.

The price tables for the advance margin simulator and the description of its commercial aspects are available in the commercial policy available on the product page. The service's fee structure will come into effect as of December 1, 2026.
